foreclosure, we have not been less of the provincial authorities see the of the provincial authorities see the produced. We do not see that the education at a Consulate given was warrants any additional force, and grants both Mr. Seward and Mr. Winchester repudiate such an idea. The Chinese then an indefensible right that their warrants shall run in the elements without any authentication. If this be admitted, foreign property owners have no longer any protection in their right of ownership. Practically, the Chinese residents may be made to go many forms of extortion, under the names of house tax, lodging tax, and that they will be obliged to bear the settlement, and put up with the definite taxation of their own made rents in some place where they will be free from the definite rate of taxation which they are, in addition, subjected by the Municipality. Foreseeing that the burden of taxation on the Chinese residents would eventually be come overpowered by the Council has designedly brought the matter up as an issue, and now boldly notes that it has the power which it may assume in order to fulfil the duty, wherewith it is charged. If it does possess that power, it can with safety undertake the supervision of foreign interests in matters which do not come fairly within the range of diplomatic interference. If, on the contrary, it does not, it must in self-defence limit its powers. We must to understand the line of thought which has governed the Council. It is therefore evident that the objection or taxes levied by the Chinese is not fairly within the scope of the Report, and as the meeting was called to consider that Report, the resolution was not, in fact, beyond the question which the meeting was convened. We indeed can we understand the ground upon which H.B.M. Consul pleads ignorance of the course which public discussion has to take. The important subject of the correspondence between the Consul and the Land Renting the past year was this question; and the Consul must have imagined that the Council was so forgetful of its duties if it neglected to take the opinion of the Land Renters upon a point of such vital interest. It was impossible that the question could fail to arise, and therefore we are surprised no steps were taken towards meeting the Land Renters with a array of facts rather than with to the Council, the Consul and the Land Renting the chair. If the ordinary course of opposing facts by facts had been adopted, the discussion would have preserved the general character which it assumed at its commencement, and which was rightly recognised by H.B.M. Consul inasmuch as he called immediately before leaving the day that "he was not opposed from any personal feelings to the views of the Council." We cannot therefore agree with the Chief Consul in his attitude, the title could not be adopted. It only disturbs the relations which should exist between H. M.'s subjects and the Consular Officers. Doubtless, the proposer and seconder of the resolution fore-saw the effect it would have. Neither the English Consul nor the American Consul General could permit the meeting; and therefore it is certain either to produce a pledge of action in the case of "irregular" warrants would be suspended pending the investigation, or the meeting would be of things that would necessitate the active interference of the Minister. The measure contemplated by the resolution could not be passed without the consent of the Consuls, and therefore was ab initio doomed to present failure, but the object of the Council has not gained in enforcing an action on the part of the consular authorities which will either, relieve it from its present responsibility, or, with the responsibility, constitute the power to the Consul to the issue of stamping warrants at the Consulate, if, as Mr. Seward and Winchester imply, it is only an empty form, the document to done away with the better. We do lay much stress on the insertion of the character non in an rent from S. how as implying a deliberate attempt at insult on the part of the Chinese, because we are clearly of opinion that the importance to be attached to its use by persons impeding the Treaty has been grossly and surely over-rated. But inasmuch as it is forbidden by the Treaty it is not sufficient to prove the violation of a Treaty. Nor can we understand how such an oversight as complained of by Mr. Hogg could be, if, as is stated in Memorandum No. 1, such warrant is examined, first by the Chinese writer, secondly by the Consul, and thirdly by the Interpreter. Unless some protection is afforded foreign interests, the stamping of Consulates is useless. It is far more to provide against the abuse of the
